LODGING IN JACKSON HOLE

About this activity

Whether you're looking for a private condo, boutique hotel or resort lodge, overnight accommodations in Jackson are open with added health and safety precautions and in most cases, more flexible cancellation policies. "We are open and available for bookings," says Johanna Holbrook, director of sales at the SpringHill Suites by Marriott. "We want to make sure people can travel and feel safe to travel."

You'll find that the majority of lodging options are concentrated in the town of Jackson and Teton Village. If you're hoping to spend your entire time skiing at Jackson Hole Mountain Resort, look at staying in Teton Village to minimize travel. You'll be able to walk to the slopes instead of driving or taking public transportation. If a variety of activities are on your agenda or you're wanting to spend more time around the heart of Jackson Hole, look into staying in the town of Jackson. You'll be closer to the bulk of Jackson's best restaurants, in walking distance to shops on the Town Square, and a 20-minute car ride to skiing in Teton Village.

Look into renting a car during your visit to limit exposure to other parties on public transportation. In the winter, a car is especially helpful to get around the Jackson Hole valley – whether you're driving to the ski resorts, into Grand Teton National Park looking for wildlife or meeting a guide for a snowshoe tour. Remember to plan ahead as parking areas may be limited and if you opt to use public transportation bring a mask to wear and prepare for extra wait times due to social distancing.

Things might look a little different this year, so here are a few things to keep in mind:

- The Chamber of Commerce keeps a list of open lodging, noting any temporary or seasonal closures so you can best plan your visit.
- Each individual property will have different cancellation policies, choose one you're flexible with.
- Precautions such as contactless check-in/check-out and protective mask-wearing requirements by all hotel staff and guests exist in some form or another in accordance with local and state guidelines.

LODGING

Each business will look different, but there are precautions each are taking to keep our community, and you, safe as well as things you can do to travel and enjoy your visit responsibly.

- The staff will be following current local and state COVID-19 guidelines and recommendations so check the individual websites or call the property for the latest updates.
- Plan ahead and be flexible with your plans – know that there may be limited services or changes in operations, like a grab and go breakfast instead of a buffet and limited lobby access.
- Daily housekeeping may be unavailable to limit outside exposure to your room.
- Per local ordinance, masks are required in public spaces include the lobby and pool areas if available.
